Critical Security Studies And World Politics

Synopsis

Realist assumptions of security studies increasingly have been challenged by an approach that places the human being, rather than the state, at the center of security concerns. This book is structured around three concepts - security, community, and emancipation - that arguably are central to the future shape of world politics.

Customer Reviews

"A spirited, passionate, and conceptually sophisticated expression of the critical studies school. The authors point to new ways of conceptualizing the world and understanding the factors and forces that are recasting the international landscape.... will be welcomed by scholars and students alike." - Fen Osler Hampson, Carleton University"

Ken Booth is E.H. Carr Professor and head of the Department of International Politics, University of Wales, Aberystwyth. His numerous publications include Strategy and Ethnocentrism, Contemporary Strategy: Theories and Policies and New Thinking About Strategy and International Security.

Very informative

This is a great introduction to the concepts of critical security studies. Steve Smith's chapter on "The "Contested Concept of Security" provides an especially useful overview of the different approaches within the critical security field. In my opinion, Ken Booth and Richard Wyn Jones are not entirely convincing in their emancipatory approach, and perhaps the inclusion of a more post-structural approach to security and emancipation could have usefully offset that. Nonetheless, I very useful book and one that will no doubt be reread.
