HOWARD-YANA SHAPIRO, Ph.D., is chief agricultural officer and global director of Plant Science and External Research at Mars Incorporated. Shapiro has guided Mars toward the goal of 100% sustainably sourced cacao production since joining the company in the late 1990s. He has spent more than 35 years working with sustainable agricultural and agroforestry systems, plant systems, plant genetics, and food production systems across the world. Shapiro is a popular speaker, including at TEDMED and TED Amsterdam.

A rich book that is fun to look at and fun to read: well-illustrated, bite-size chunks of chocolate history from the Aztecs to the astronauts. Chocolate has more lore and legend attached to it than any other comestible except perhaps wine, and Great Moments in Chocolate History ranges happily from chocolate's association with witchcraft to chocolate syrup filling in for the blood in the famous shower scene in the movie Psycho. The recipes too cover a wide range, from elegant chocolate tiramisu to a cacao and banana drink of the Kuna people off the coast of Panama, which protected them from heart disease. It is a great book for the holidays, any holidays.

Great!
